
This is Our Moment

This is Our Moment is a rolling programme of authentic creative development and a long-term commitment to sustainable social change.

It is a record of our on-going creative journey and a resource to inspire further development.

Everything we do is focused on our long-term development and everything we share helps build a creative resource for both ourselves and others.

If you want to see lasting change in our lives and communities then join me for a walk in development and find out more.

Join our community.

A development community is a group of people who support each other's journey in development and share what we learn to build resources for further creative development.

Walks in development

Walks in Development are short walks that help us focus on our creative development.

They help remind us who we are and bring us into a creative alignment with those around us and the wider world.

After each walk I will remind you of the moments we experienced and support you with your next steps .

What people say

"Learning a new systematic way of approaching development of an idea/person/project was super helpful" (Sara Zaltash).

"I found it inspired. I feel that it really highlights how less is more. Your approach is completely unobtrusive, but what you provide is an environment and a situation where you feel relaxed and at ease and with the space to talk as you wish". (Georgina Mallabar).
